COMPLETED.

Constitution and By-Laws For the Government of the Catholic Union.

Will Be Directed by Executive Committee and Meet Monthly.

Affiliation With National Federation of Catholic Clubs Approved.

MEETS NEXT WITH AQUINAS UNION.

The most interesting meeting yet held by the Catholic Union was presided over by President Edward J. McDermott at Trinity Hall Sunday afternoon. The delegates all took part in the proceedings, which were important throughout, including changes in the constitution and the adoption of by-laws, which now leaves the body thoroughly organized and ready to enter actively upon the work for which it was organized.

The changes in the constitution recommended by the Board of Directors were read by Secretary Cooney. Each was carefully considered, and after full discussion all were approved of. Instead of a large and cumbersome Board of Directors there will be an Executive Committee of at least seven members, thus giving representation to all organizations rather than divisions or branches. The Executive Committee will have great power in the interim between meetings, but will report all its business to the union. It may also call special meetings and act in matters not provided for in the constitution and by-laws.

Hereafter the sessions of the union will be held on the 28th of each month at 7:30 p. m., thus interfering but very little with the meetings of any of the affiliated societies and insuring a larger attendance of delegates. There was an almost unanimous feeling against Sunday sessions, and the foregoing date was chosen only after considerable debate. The chairman of each delegation will receive official notification of all meetings and transmit the same to his colleagues and the body they represent.

Upon motion it was decided to notify the promoters of the National Federation of Catholic Clubs, who have called a meeting at the Fifth Avenue Hotel in New York City for Thanksgiving day, that the movement met with the approval of the union, which would affiliate and later send delegates to the national meetings.

For the purpose of creating greater interest in the union and making Catholics generally better acquainted with its purposes and acts it was unanimously decided to invite the entire membership of those bodies at whose halls meetings were held, who will receive a hearty welcome, though not allowed to participate in the proceedings.

President John Crotty presented a cordial invitation to the union to hold its next meeting, which occurs Wednesday evening, November 28, with the Aquinas Union at its hall on Sixth street, near Oak, and it was unanimously accepted. Rumor has it that the Aquinas members have arranged a pleasant surprise for the delegates and members that evening, but its nature will not be made known for the present. However, those who fail to attend will certainly miss much that would entertain and interest them.

The meeting was made interesting by remarks by President Sullivan of Trinity Council, President McDermott, David O'Connell, Dr. J. W. Fowler, Dan Tierney, Pat Holly, Miss Mary Sheridan, James Rogers and other. Quite a number of responses were received to the circular sent out by Secretary Cooney, who expects many more before the next meeting.

LECTURE A SUCCESS.

Sacred Heart Church Packed to Hear Rev. Father Hayes.

Perhaps the largest gathering of people ever witnessed at the Sacred Heart church assembled there last Sunday night to hear Rev. Father Hayes, of Bowling Green, deliver his "Reminiscences of Rome." First the pews were filled, then the aisles, and finally ladies were seated at the altar railing, besides which a large number of city clergymen occupied seats in the sanctuary.

Father Hayes is one of the most pleasing speakers in this State, and his lecture surpasses any heard here for a long time, many pronouncing it the most brilliant as well as interesting they ever listened to.

Father Hayes entered the pulpit and paid a beautiful tribute to the St. Vincent de Paul Society, passing over its origin and history, and telling of its relation to the church. Then he took his hearers from Naples to Pompeii, then to Rome, and from there to France and Ireland, and his word-painting entranced all. Going back again to Rome, the Rome of old, he gave a most realistic description of it from its foundation to the present day. To attempt to do the lecture justice in a synopsis would be ridiculous. His was a masterly effort and should be heard to be appreciated. It is one that ought to fill the Auditorium could Father Hayes be induced to repeat it there. From beginning to end his pleased auditors took in every word, and were it anywhere else the applause would have been tremendous when he closed with his eloquent and touching allusion to Pope Leo.

After the devotion to the St. Vincent de Paul Society for bringing Father Hayes where they could hear him.

ALUMNAE SOCIETY.

Its Grand Euchre Party the Largest Ever Given Here.

The prize euchre party given at Music Hall last Monday night under the auspices of the Alumnae Society of the Academy of Our Lady of Mercy was the grandest ever given in Louisville, both socially and as to number of players, of whom there were nearly 800, representing the best class of society people. All took advantage of the opportunity to show their appreciation of the young ladies who for the past couple of months worked so zealously for the Sisters' bazar.

Their pretty booth was always surrounded by friends and patrons and the happy suggestion was made that after the close of the bazar they arrange for the special entertainment of all who had aided them. The euchre party was thus decided upon, and its surprising popularity and success greatly exceeded their most sanguine expectations. The alumnae ladies, whose names were given last week, received their guests most charmingly and made the evening indeed enjoyable for them. Every available inch of space was occupied and there were besides many spectators present to witness the games.

There were twenty prizes contested for, the lucky winners being announced in the following order:

Miss Katherine Hubbuch, set solid silver forks.

Mrs. A. H. Hukenbeck, solid gold stand mirror.

Miss Mammie Boeswald, jardiner, pedestal and palm.

Mrs. George Russell, hand embroidered table cover.

Mrs. Phil Erwin, order for Wybrant cabinet pictures.

Miss Emma Smith, hand painted chocolate jar.

Miss Katie Guy, handsome Parisian hat.

Miss Kate Heraty, handsome handkerchief sack.

Miss L. Frehling, hand embroidered handkerchiefs.

Miss Mary Kelly, handsome glove case.

Pat Bannon, Jr., pair patent leather shoes.

Henry Evers, gold trimmed umbrella.

A. Isaacs, order for dozen Wybrant photographs.

Albert Koertner, pair silver trimmed suspenders.

John Smith, dozen linen handkerchiefs.

George Burkley, Dr. William B. Doherty's lecture book.

Lee Kuhn, dozen gent's half hose.

E. Goodcase, Stetson silk hat and band.

Thomas Higgins, beautiful silk and satin tie.

James L. Rapier, exquisite applewood pipe.

The closing games were animated and exciting, and this will remain the record breaking euchre for a long time to come.

CELEBRATE TOMORROW.

St. John's Conference of the St. Vincent de Paul Society.

St. John's conference of the St. Vincent de Paul Society will tomorrow morning celebrate its forty-fourth anniversary, the active and honorary members receiving holy communion in a body at the 7:30 mass. This conference was brought into existence on the first Sunday in November, 1856, by the Very Rev. Father Bax, and has therefore been in active operation forty-four years, during which long period of time thousands of dollars have been disbursed in charity and numberless worthy families relieved while in distress.

The regular conference meeting will take place in St. John's school hall tomorrow afternoon immediately after vespers, when the members of the conferences of all other parishes will be welcomed. There are few, if any, other Catholic societies in this city older than this, and the anniversary services will be made appropriate to so notable an occasion. The present officers, several of whom have served for many years, are as follows:

Spiritual Director—Very Rev. Father Bax.

President—John Murray.

Vice President—R. J. Mann.

Secretary—B. J. Metcalfe.

Treasurer—Thomas P. Hill.

PASSED AWAY WHILE ASLEEP.

Mrs. Mary Crofts, wife of George Crofts, died Tuesday afternoon at the family residence, 711 Fifteenth street, after an illness of only a week's duration. Saturday night she entered into what appeared a quiet sleep, that continued until her death, sixty-seven hours afterward. The deceased was forty-eight years old, and besides her husband leaves three children to mourn her loss. Her funeral took place from St. Mary's church Thursday, and the remains were followed to their last resting place by many sorrowing friends and relatives.

INDIANA.

Political Excitement at Fever Heat in New Albany and Jeffersonville.

Hon. Hugh O'Connor Making a Strong Race in Third District.

Barney Coll and James W. Fortune Are Confident of Victory.

THEIR FRIENDS ARE HARD AT WORK

The political campaign in Southern Indiana, which has now practically closed, has been most exciting in New Albany and Jeffersonville, where for the past two weeks nightly rallies have been held by the enthusiastic followers of the different candidates. With frequent parades and rallies, large and small, there has been none of the political apathy exhibited on this side of the river. Both sides are claiming a decisive majority, but the Democrats manifest feelings of the greatest confidence.

HON. HUGH O'CONNOR.
Candidate for Congress in the Third Indiana District.

One of the surprises of the pending election is the marvelous strength developed by Hon. Hugh O'Connor, of Corydon, who is the opponent against Congressman Zenor in the Third district. His canvass has been conducted in a manner which has gained him many votes, and though he has a large majority to overcome his friends will not be greatly astonished if he wins his race. Hugh O'Connor is a highly educated and able young man, of pleasing appearance, and if he defeats the present incumbent the people of the Third district will find in him a Congressman worthy of their confidence and respect—a man of the people and for the people.

There has not a night passed this week in which there were not one or more Democratic rallies in Jeffersonville and vicinity, extending from Clarksville to Port Fulton, and the poll recently taken shows an increased majority for William Bryan, Barney Coll and James Fortune. During the past few years there have been disclosures of defalcations and shortages in the office of the County Treasurer of Clark county, by which the taxpayers have lost large sums of money. These losses are due to the dishonesty and inefficiency of the Republican officeholders, some of whom are now candidates. The Democrats are determined upon an honest administration of the affairs of Jeffersonville, and made a most judicious selection when they named Barney Coll as their standard bearer. For many years he has been one of the most progressive of Jeffersonville's citizens, and no man in Southern Indiana has a better reputation for integrity or business ability. Popular as an Elk and Hibernian, he will add great strength to the ticket, and many Republicans have expressed their intention of voting for him.

James W. Fortune, nominee for joint Senator, is another well known and popular young man who adds great strength to the Democratic ticket. He is in every way qualified for the Senatorship. Not only popular with the business element, he enjoys also the confidence of the workmen, who will give him their individual support. With such a representative in the State Senate the interests of the three counties will be intelligently looked after. There seems no doubt of his election, notwithstanding the untiring efforts of the Republicans. They are handicapped with a mediocre candidate, and Fortune's supporters, among them a number of Republicans, say the only question in doubt is the size of his already certain majority.

Hon. Edwin F. Catley will have an easy walkover in Floyd county for reelection to the Legislature. During his former term of office he made an enviable reputation as a legislator, giving particular attention and hearty support to all measures calculated to advance the interests of the laboring people of Indiana. From all parts of the State have come warm endorsements of him, and were he on the State ticket none would receive more votes.

The gentlemen mentioned above are all well known and their election, now assured, will be hailed with delight by their thousands of followers.

GAELIC LEAGUE

Has Gained Many Notable Adherents During Past Year.

Seldom has there been even within the old walls of the historic Rotunda a finer gathering, representative of all that is best in Irish life, than that which assembled recently in Dublin to hear Dr. Douglas Hyde's lecture on "The Educational Influence of the Gaelic League." The audience was worthy of the lecturer and the lecturer of the audience. A higher compliment could not be paid to either. When the Chairman of the Irish Parliamentary party, when W. B. Yeats and other foremost figures in the literary world, educationalists like Dr. O'Hickey and Father Murphy, accomplished writers like Father Sheehan, teachers and artisans, business men, professional men, priests and laymen, men and women, come forward to identify themselves absolutely and unreservedly with a certain course, there can be no doubt but that it is the course which the nation is bent on taking. Moreover, this course, which is nothing more or less than the recreation of an Irish Ireland, has not been entered on thoughtlessly, nor is it going to be abandoned lightly. Those who are committed to it mean to persist with dogged perseverance till the end in view is attained. If ever people were in earnest Gaelic Leaguers are, declares the Dublin Independent.

Last Thursday's magnificent meeting was a striking evidence of the progress of the movement since last year, when the session of the central branch was opened by Father Yorke's lecture. Then the promoters of the undertaking were satisfied with filling the Antient Concert Rooms. Now the audience bidden to a similar function overflows the Rotunda, and if the movement continues to attract adherents at the same rate as it has done during the past year, there will soon be no hall in Dublin large enough to contain a Gaelic League gathering.

The title of Father Yorke's lecture was well chosen. The turning of the tide has indeed come; a tide that will sweep all before it. The Gaelic League has reason to congratulate itself on having gained many notable adherents. Some of the most representative Irishmen of the day are to be found in its ranks, but few pronouncements made in its favour carry such weight, and consequently give cause for such unbounded satisfaction to the League as the emphatic declaration of John Redmond, who said: "I am delighted at the opportunity afforded me of publicly identifying myself with the Gaelic League," and having explained his thorough sympathy with the whole scope of the language movement, the truly national character of which he recognizes, he went on to say that his services might be counted on to further the cause "inside and outside of Parliament." It is needless to point out how valuable to the movement is this thoroughgoing advocacy of the Chairman of the Parliamentary party.

All the speeches at the Rotunda meeting were up to a high level and in keeping with the brilliant address which they followed; but the singularly beautiful sentiments so beautifully expressed by W. B. Yeats appealed in an especial manner to the higher nature of a race in whom idealism is inherent, though in these degenerate days materialism seems to be making alarming inroads. A voice such as that of the poet patriot recalls those who harken to it to higher things than the sometimes, though not necessarily, sordid cares of everyday life. "Do not barter your national birthright for a mess of pottage." Such in effect is the advice earnestly given to their compatriots by the two foremost writers of the Anglo-Irish school. What Dr. Hyde calls "the still, small voice of the Gaelic League" is raised for the same purpose. The League stands as a witness for idealism versus materialism, as well as for national individuality versus cosmopolitanism.

A BLOW AT A LOCAL TRUST.

Mr. Rufus J. Childress, author of a meritorious book of poems, "Woods and Waters," which was published here recently, has just brought out another small book, entitled "A Satire on Trusts, Trust Officials and Their Methods," which is a rather spirited attempt. Having to fight the trusts alone it seems, he first pays his respects to them thus: Tools of the Trust, I come! I come! Like fierce Alaric on to Rome! My Pegasus with daring grit Now paws the earth and champs the bit; With panting heart that urges on, Distended nostrils, red as dawn, Dilated eyes like bulbs of fire, Feet prouetted that never tire, More eager than Bucephalus, My winged charger Pegasus Whereon so long I have careered; And still his rider cuirassured With golden truths, I come! I come!

Such a work at only ten cents a copy will doubtless meet with a large sale.

FIRST MASK PARTY.

Invitations have been issued for the select mask party of the Bantam Leaf Socials, which takes place at Fisher's Hall, Baxter avenue, on Monday night, November 12. The organization is composed of well-known young men of the East End. Those having the affair in charge are James Minogue, James Burke, Jake Trebing, Will Ford and Henry Minogue.

IRISH PARTY

Has Summoned Convention to Direct Future Course in Parliament.

William O'Brien, Leader of the Irish League, Interprets His Victory.

Battle Against Landlordism and Dublin Castle to Begin in Earnest.

DISUNION IS NOW AT AN END

William O'Brien, member of Parliament for Cork City, now wields a power in Ireland as great as Parnell wielded. He started the United Irish League twelve months ago and today eighty-two men

ANTHONY MONTEDONICO.
Popular Italian Who Has Made a Fortune in Louisville.

bers of the League have been returned to Parliament. Last Saturday he gave out this statement, embodying his interpretation of the meaning and effect of the victory he has achieved:

The general election has realized the wildest hopes of the most sanguine men. It found us with the country half organized and with an election fund ridiculously inadequate.

We had to make head against a confederacy of the most formidable and unnatural kind bent upon perpetrating the disorganization of the country, bankrupting the general election fund and taking advantage of the hurly burly and chaos of a general election to drive another wedge of dissension into the heart of the Irish party.

The United Irish League had against it an array of influences, selfish, anti-national, corrupt, that to all human seeming there was no resisting.

Lo! the morning after the great encounter the League holds the field by a majority more overpowering than ever an Irish political organization commanded before and the scattered items of the Healyite cohorts in their ruin and their shame are crying to the hills to fall upon them and hide their heads.

The electors showed a temper so unmistakable and irresistible that in only three instances out of eighty-one did any open antagonist of the League take heart to challenge their verdict.

A national convention has now been summoned by the League to direct the future course of the new Irish party and to cheer, guide and stimulate Mr. Redmond and his colleagues in their great work of forcing the Irish question to the front in the British Parliament by every means that courage, combat and self-sacrifice can supply.

The weaklings and rogues who coolly propose to undo the whole work of the general election by taking Healy back into the bosom of the party he brought to death's door might as well propose that the party should begin and end its new career by swallowing a dose of prussic acid.

The virulent poison which was fevering the blood of the country and corrupting Irish public life has been expelled from its system. Mr. Redmond and his faithful colleagues, old and new, will be free to turn all their power and vigor toward an assault all along the line on landlordism and Dublin Castle.

It is evident from O'Brien's statement that the first business of the new party will be to expel Healy, a course to which some objection is being raised by the few Nationalists who argue that Healy will now turn over a new leaf.

LIMERICK DEMOCRATS.

The Young Men's Limerick Democratic Club will hold a big rally tonight at Seventh and St. Catherine streets. Gov. Beckham will be the first speaker, to be followed by Hon. Ollie James, who had to cancel his engagement at this point last Saturday night on account of a sore throat.

IRISH WOMEN FIRST.

London's last verdict in the matter of female beauty has just been rendered and promulgated, says an Irish correspondent. On Saturday last, the closing day of the Earl's Court exhibition, the votes for the "Women of All Nations" competition were counted and the prizes distributed. The result was as follows:

Ireland was an easy first with a majority of 33,095 votes, and received according the $500 prize; England came second, receiving $325; Scotland third, receiving $250; and Canada fourth, receiving $100. Medals were awarded in the order named to Japan, America, Spain, Switzerland, France, Holland, Belgium and Russia.

Who shall in future venture to doubt that the Londoner is incapable of a display of chivalrous impartiality?

DEDICATED.

St. John's Cathedral at Savannah Most Magnificent in the South.

Last Sunday, the feast day of Sts. Simon and Jude, the magnificent new Cathedral of St. John the Baptist was dedicated by Monsignor Martinelli, Papal delegate to the United States, assisted by over fifty priests and ten Bishops, the latter including the Right Rev. Henry Moeller, of Columbus; Edward Allen, of Mobile; Sebastian Byrne, of Nashville; Theophile Meer-schaert, of Indian Territory; A. Van Devyver, of Richmond; Leo Haid, of North Carolina; Alfred A. Curtis, of Baltimore; Henry P. Northrop, of Charleston; John Moore, of St. Augustine; B. J. Kelley, of Savannah.

Monsignor Martinelli was the celebrant of the mass, assisted by Vicar Gen. Bazin, of Atlanta, Rev. Dr. Brannen, of New York, Rev. Dr. Rooker, of Washington, and Rev. Dr. Flynn, of Morristown, N. J. The weather was perfect, and the services were attended by an immense throng. The exercises lasted three hours, but so beautiful and impressive were they that there was not an auditor left the building during their continuance.

The procession was headed by fifty altar boys vested in black, red and white cassocks and white surplices. The clergy followed, attired in the robes of their episcopal and sacerdotal offices. The ceremony of dedication itself did not occupy more than half to three-quarters of an hour. The Pontifical high mass which followed was of greater length, and was interspersed with elaborate music by the choir. The exercises were concluded with the sermon by the Rev. William O'Brien Pardow, S. J., of Washington. Dr. Pardow is the ex-provincial of the Jesuits in this province, and is now connected with St. Aloysius church in Washington.

After the conclusion of the services the visiting prelates proceeded to the DeSoto Hotel, where they partook of an elaborate dinner tendered by the local entertainment committee in honor of Monsignor Martinelli.

At the vespers service at 8 o'clock Bishop Leo Haid, of North Carolina, preached, and an elaborate musical programme was rendered by the choir. Apart from the dedication of the Cathedral the celebration was notable as marking the fiftieth anniversary of the foundation of the diocese of Savannah.

The new Cathedral, built upon the ruins of the Cathedral begun by Bishop Persico in 1873, dedicated by Bishop Gross, in 1876 and destroyed by fire two years ago, is probably the handsomest specimen of Gothic architecture in the South. The transept has a depth of about 100 feet, a width of 80 feet. The aisles are laid with encaustic tiling, while the spaces between the front pews and the sanctuary and in the rear of the pews are laid with marble tiling. The walls of the building are of a deep buff color, while the ceiling is of a bright cream color, the effect of which is greatly enhanced by the ivory tone of the branching arches. The wainscoting around the walls is of marble. The building is lighted throughout with both gas and electricity.

WILL THEY?

County Board Urged to Give Another of Its Select Socials.

The select dance given by the County Board of the Ancient Order of Hibernians at their hall Monday night was surprisingly enjoyable and a great social success. There was a large attendance of young and old, and nothing was left undone that would add to the pleasure of the occasion.

The Irish reels that were danced proved a revelation to many. Those who participated in them were graceful and at the same time lively. John Grogan and his assistants kept everything moving nicely until a late hour, when all pronounced it the best of the season and urged that the County Board soon give another.

FATHER O'SULLIVAN'S BAZAR.

Monday evening the bazar and fair for the benefit of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament will open at the school hall on East Washington street. Father O'Sullivan and the ladies and gentlemen of the parish have completed all the arrangements and those who attend are assured an enjoyable time. There will be handsome booths at which desirable articles will be disposed of at reasonable prices, and each evening there will be pleasing features for the amusement of those who attend. Father O'Sullivan deserves the support of Catholics generally in his noble work.

French knots are as commonly used for dress decoration as they were last spring.

EMMET'S

Anniversary Will Be Commemorated by Irish-American Society.

This Was Decided Upon and Committee Appointed Thursday.

Will Be More Elaborate Than the Recent Banquet at Music Hall.

MORE WORK FOR THE MEMBERS

The Irish-American Society at its meeting Thursday night decided by unanimous vote to celebrate the coming anniversary of Robert Emmet, Ireland's martyr patriot, and this will be most pleasing intelligence to the sons and daughters of the Green Isle residing in this city. The celebration will be on an elaborate scale, the desire being to surpass any event of a similar character ever witnessed in Louisville. Enthusiastic remarks were made when the subject was introduced, all favoring an annual observance of the day hereafter.

The attendance at Thursday night's meeting was surprisingly large when one remembers the many political meetings that were being held throughout the city and the many other attractions to interest the members. Vice President Claire occupied the chair in the absence of President Feeney, and Joe Nevins was appointed First Vice President. The usual routine business was transacted and claims allowed, and the proceedings were very interesting. Quite a number of applications for membership were received, and there were other evidences of increased interest in this organization.

The resolution that the anniversary of Robert Emmet be annually celebrated by the Irish-American Society was received with great favor, enthusiastic speeches being made by Tom Camfield, John Flynn, Gus Kane and others, and then unanimously adopted. The remarks of all urged that the initial commemoration be one that will never be forgotten, and that all members interest themselves at once. Upon motion the entire matter was referred to a committee composed of Messrs. Joe Byrne, William Patterson, Joe Nevins, Tom Tarpey, J. F. Chester and Pat Connaughton, who will determine the manner of observing the event and report at the next meeting. The committee is a strong one and if continued will arrange for a celebration that will mark an era in the history of the Irish-Americans of Louisville. The next meeting takes place November 15, and all should be present to be assigned their share of the work in this grand undertaking.

CANDY PULLING TODAY

The Little Folks Will Have a Jolly Time at Holy Cross School.

Rev. B. F. Cunningham, the successful and popular pastor of Holy Cross church, will entertain the pupils of his school and their little friends this afternoon with a candy pulling, which will commence at 2 o'clock in the school room and continue several hours. The one given last year was attended by children from all parts of the city, who will rejoice at the announcement of another such jolly affair. They will receive a cordial welcome today and all the candy they want.

After school last Wednesday afternoon the children were given a most unexpected but agreeable surprise. Father Cunningham, who never tires of making the little ones happy, had arranged a number of Halloween games for their amusement, such as ducking in tubs of water for small coins, bobbing for apples, etc., and a nice treat for each one.

There were but twenty-four pupils in attendance when Holy Cross school was opened five years ago, while today the number has been increased to eighty-five, for which the most credit is due the zealous pastor, who has endeared himself to every one of them by his uniform kindness and interest in all matters pertaining to their present amusement and future welfare. Those who attend this afternoon will not soon forget the happy occasion.

LEAVES SEVEN CHILDREN.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. Joseph Discher, which occurred Thursday at her home on the Taylorsville road, after a brief illness. She was the daughter of Mrs. Ephrosina Geher and sister of Messrs. Frank and Bernard Geher. Besides her husband she leaves seven children to mourn the loss of a loving and Christian mother, four of whom are now ill of typhoid fever. Her funeral takes place this morning from St. Francis of Rome church. Rev. Father White will be the celebrant of the solemn requiem mass. To the bereaved husband and children we extend our heartfelt sympathy.

Lace applique on gold gauze is used for collars and vests on gowns of all degrees of dressiness and thickness of material.
